6b) The driveway of the original residence has not been changed but an additional driveway has been constructed; or

Two separate driveway's have been constructed; or

The single driveway has been modified (eg re-surfaced); or

The single driveway has been relocated

► You will need to provide a copy of the Verge/Driveway Inspection Certificate which is issued after an inspection of the form work for the driveway/verge/s by Traffic and Roads Section. This Certificate is given to the builder/lessee on completion of the inspection.

Definition of Class A and Class B units

Two types of units are described in the Unit Titles Act -Class A and Class B units.

The boundaries of Class A units are defined by the floors, walls and ceilings of the units. Ancillary land or buildings, such as a garage or courtyard may be subsidiaries of a unit. Examples of Class A units are the Kingston Tower and the Capital Tower.

Class B units are not limited by vertical dimensions. They are often in single storey clusters.

Some unit developments (except for two unit residential) may be built in stages which enables the developer to sell some completed units while others are under construction.
