| Narellan Place | Narellan House,Coranderrk Street,Reid, ACT. | Narellan House accommodated workers who came to Canberra to assist in the building and establishment of the city. It was occupied from 1949 and was used for accommodation purposes until 1976. Narellan House consisted of forty-six single &amp; two double rooms, a main lounge room where a piano and wireless were provided. The laundry contained 2 fuel coppers, ironing boards etc. Women were housed in the north wing and the men in the south. Narellan House survived all other Canberra hostels and then became a residence for tertiary students before being redeveloped as an apartment complex on Coranderrk Street, Reid. The hostel's buildings were originally from the Narellan Military Camp, which was built during the war, near Camden, NSW. At the end of the war the army huts were moved from nearby Narellan to Canberra on five semi-trailers, thus becoming one of the early government hostels in Canberra. |
